All Call of Duty talk could be around Black Ops Cold War and this week, with both games getting their great Season 1 release and finally joining forces, but Modern Warfare is not going anywhere in itself. Infinity Ward's latest Call of Duty game got an update this week, and just as split happened to separate Warzone and Modern Warfare. The update in question refreshed the playlist options in the Warfare and also buffed two different weapons, among a few other fixes added to the game. The patch notes for the modern warfare update look a little different this time now that they no longer deal with Warzone. Modern Warfare would occasionally receive its own updates that do not affect the battle reare egame at all, but usually the released patches would have two separate sets of changes for each game and occasional overlapping notes dealing with things like battle pass progression. Tonight's update for #ModernWarfare will start running on all platforms at 11PM PDT.
